Cameras, ID badges part of master plan

Explaining the philosophy behind Shelton's security plan is Dean of Students Humphrey Lee. Security officer Larry Lee positions himself to view the monitors of the college's security system

By Jim Shaw

Security cameras, ID badges and eventually kiosks with terminals placed throughout the campus are aspects of a campus plan that has been on the drawing board for Shelton since the campus was conceived in the early '90s.

Many of the cameras are in place and the ID badges are on the way. The campus of the future is materializing right in front of our very eyes.

The first concern within the administration is for security for not only the students, but the faculty and staff as well. "We feel that the best way to do this is by requiring students to wear an identification badge," Director of Security George Toxey said.

"Shelton is in the process of instituting a plan in the upcoming weeks that will keep the students safer on campus," according to Toxey.

The first part of this plan, which has already been in the works, involves the use of cameras on hallways, entrances and parking lots.

Each faculty and staff member will be responsible for wearing the identification badge in a visible on the clothing. Will this really keep all of us safer? Central High

Shelton Singers asking "family" to come back for a millennial reunion

By Jennifer Haynes

When Shelton State Community College was getting started, there was no music department. In fall 1979, Syble Coats applied for and received the job of choir director.

Coats had no students, so she found a small group of seniors who would help her to make the Shelton Singers a reality. Since there was no state-of-the-art music wing at Shelton's modest campus, the South Highlands Baptist Church, on 39th St., served as a rehearsal hall for the 16-member group. The original choir, under Coats, managed to build a wonderful reputation and the members began to grow, but it would always retain a feeling of family.

This closeness continued to thrive as gifted tenor Everett McCorvey, who taught voice classes, took the reins as director. But, eventually McCorvey left for a professional singing career.

The late Joy Dendy managed to keep the spirit and closeness that had become synonymous with the Shelton Singers flourishing until she could pass the torch to Glinda Blackshear in fall 1987. "Shelton Singers has always felt like a family. We are trying to recreate and renew that feeling" says Blackshear.

"Shelton will sponsor a reunion of all former members of the Shelton Singers Saturday, Nov. 6 and 7," said Blackshear. "This reunion will be another activity of Shelton's Millennium Celebration. We are inviting all of the people who were in Shelton Singers' history to come and celebrate with us."

This year's Homecoming to feature "street dance"

By Kim Eaton

What exactly is a "tradition"? Since this is the second year Shelton has had a Homecoming, does that make it an honored occasion? According to Humphrey Lee, Dean of Students at Shelton, that is what he is aiming for but he realizes that "it will take time to establish it as a tradition."

The main idea Shelton has for Homecoming is to highlight a focus group, whether it be a sports team or honorary society. "It's something that students spend a lot of time with and that's what they (the students) remember," states Lee. This year the Shelton State Singers will be having a reunion and concert at the end of Homecoming week to wrap up the week's events.

Also new at Homecoming this year is the basketball game. Usually homecoming is tied to a sporting event. After a year of a scheduled arbitrary date, this year Shelton decided to have their Homecoming accompanied with a basketball game. It will be the first game of the season where, on Nov. 4, the Shelton State Buccaneers will do battle against Gadsden State.

“Keep Looking Up!”

By Dr. Lee Albritton

The Most Famous Mother and Daughter of All Time

During fall and winter, a very famous and easy to locate mother and daughter constellation is in the cool, crisp night skies! The mother is the beautiful queen Cassiopeia, and Andromeda is her lovely daughter! They are both together in the sky and are very near a constellation that we have learned to find - the winged horse, Pegasus!

Let's start by looking above the eastern horizon and finding the four bright stars that make the “Great Square” of Pegasus. The square is turned and looks like a baseball diamond. Go to the star that would be third base and that is Andromeda's head. Her body runs to the left and downwards from her head, and it is made of three pairs of stars that get further apart moving from her head to her feet.

To confirm that you have found the lovely Andromeda, look below this funnel shape of stars that form her head and body, and you will find the planets, Jupiter (very bright) and Saturn (not quite as bright).

If you have very dark skies, you can see a very interesting object above the middle pair of stars that form her waist. It appears as a fuzzy spot and is another galaxy that is far beyond our own galaxy, the Milky Way. It is called the Andromeda Galaxy and is the most distant object in space - 2.1 million light-years away - that can be seen with the unaided human eye! Her mother Cassiopeia is close by keeping a watchful eye on her beautiful daughter. To locate her, simply look northeast above the third pair of stars that form the feet of Andromeda, and you will see the stars that form the lovely queen. Her stars are all equally bright and appear in the shape of the letter “W” that is turned on its side.

Both mother and daughter are married - Cassiopeia to King Cepheus and Andromeda to Perseus who saved her life from an awful sea serpent! Being excellent husbands, both Cepheus and Perseus are at their wives' sides in the sky, and together the two couples make what is called the Royal Family of the sky. Keep looking up and find the beautiful queen - Cassiopeia - and her lovely daughter - Andromeda - as well as another galaxy - the Andromeda Galaxy!

School as well as Shelton thinks so. "The purpose of this plan is to show security who belongs on campus and who does not," George Toxey says.

"The idea for this security measure has been talked about for many years but funds are now available to do it," says Karen Van Luvender, dean of financial services.

Shelton has almost finished the first step of the security plan by putting most of the security cameras, which are located in the main hallways and some entrances. Toxey said, "There are a few more locations where we need to install cameras, such as the main entrance of the campus and out in all the parking lots."

Toxey goes on to say that, "the new ID badge system will be implemented sometime in the near future but we are not sure on the exact date at this time. At this time there is no plan to charge the students for the IDs, but that is subject to change."

Humphrey Lee, Dean of Students at Shelton said, "The faculty will start wearing the ID badges in the spring semester, with the students following shortly behind. Visitors who come to the college will need to get a visitor's badge or something of that nature to show that they are a visitor on campus."

Lee also said that none of the plans involving the students have been set in stone, and he will be actively soliciting student input before implementing the ID plan. "All students who would like to voice their opinions about the IDs should talk to the SGA, which will voice the opinions of the students. Our plan is to also use the IDs as the University does, where Shelton students will be able to receive discounts at selected places."

Big brother across town—the University of Alabama—does not have any type of plan like the one Shelton is initiating. Janet Griffith, a spokesperson from the Media Relations Department at the Univer-campus a safer place. Chris Hewett, a sophomore at Shelton said, "Wearing the ID badge seems childish, however issuing the ID badges could be advantageous."

Another sophomore, Jennifer Payne, said, "I can understand that we need to have them but wearing them makes it seem like we are being treated like high school students."

Jeremy Burrage, another sophomore, said, "Issuing ID cards would be a very good idea, however myself along with most of the students, would have a negative outlook on wearing them."

Responding for the administration, Dean Lee said it hasn't been decided for sure that students will be required to wear the badges, but that it is a possibility. "This is a big building with many doors. It would be impossible to have enough security to watch who comes in and out. We think the ID badge system is the best way to go in this modern era. You can tell at a glance—whether you're a student or a staff member—if the person you're looking at is supposed to be there."

Dean Lee is most enthusiastic, though, about the possibilities for the campus in the future, a future that begins with the badges. "Our plan from the beginning was to have a space-age campus. In the future, the students' IDs will allow them to access computers in kiosks across the campus. They will not only be able to get hold of security, but also their fellow students and teachers. These will be electronic bulletin boards. The IDs will be a part of a system that will make campus life more streamlined and easier to live with."

sity of Alabama, said, "We have no plans at this time to make our students wear ID badges. They have Action Cards, which are used as a form of ID, as well as a meal card but they don't have to wear them."

Some Shelton students seem to think that the idea of having to wear an ID badge will not make the

The college will invite anyone who has ever participated to a reunion rehearsal on Saturday, Nov. 6 from 9-noon. There will be a luncheon to follow.

The former students will spend time renewing friendships, looking at old pictures and watching videotapes as well as rehearsing for the concert. Sunday, Nov. 7, the Shelton Singers reunion concert will begin at 3 p.m. in the Bean-Brown Theatre. All former members of the Singers will be recognized as they join the current Singers in performing favorite songs from the past.

According to Blackshear, "The attire for the day will be black dresses or pantsuits for the women and dark jackets with long ties for the men. Warm up will begin at 2 p.m. and the concert should last about an hour."

The concert is free. Both the reunion and concert are part of Shelton's Homecoming Week activities. Those who would like to attend are asked to confirm their attendance by Nov. 1.

Syble Coats, who started it all, remarked, "Who would have known that we would still be around?"

For additional information about this event that is being called by Coats a "time of rebounding," call Glinda Blackshear at 391-2344, or Syble Coats at 391-2270.

"Shelton will sponsor a reunion of all former members of the Shelton Singers Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 6 and 7."

Madonna Thompson, women's basketball coach, looks forward to the game, stating that she has "high expectations for the year" and hopes the team may well become "one of the top teams of the state."

The men's basketball team are "really fired up about having a home opener that is also Homecoming," states Coach Barry Mohun. "They beat Gadsden last year and want to continue that winning." Events planned for this week include a pep rally being held at 1 p.m. on Nov. 3.

SGA will be sponsoring the Pepsi stand and will have hotdogs and drinks for sale. There will also be a spirit competition between the clubs during the pep rally.

After the game on Nov. 4, there will be a dance and bonfire. According to Dean Lee, it will be more of a "street dance," being held outdoors if the weather holds up.

Different groups will be funding the dance and bonfire. The President's office and the Foundation will be covering part of the expense while SGA will be providing the D.J.

The dance is a new twist to this year's Homecoming. It was brought up by the students and finally put into the works. Since Shelton State has a "high commuter population and a high percentage of the students work, it has to be a special event in order to get them to come back to school," states Dean Lee. He hopes maybe the basketball game will entice the students to come out for Homecoming.

Other events planned for Homecoming week include a luncheon for retired staff and faculty, a wellness activity in the atrium and the Homecoming Queen competition.

Homecoming Week will begin Nov. 1 and end with the Shelton State Singers Reunion and Concert on Nov. 7.

Lyric Hall becomes portal for '80s trip

By Jennifer Hardman and Kim Eaton

Imagine for a moment sitting at a table in a dimly lit room, smoke permeating the air. Glancing towards the front door you notice students walking in, either in groups or one-by-one. Some people head to the bar for a much needed drink while others head to the pool tables and you begin to hear the sound of pool balls being knocked into the pockets. If you can imagine all of that, you have just placed yourself at the Lyric Hall on Oct. 7.

About 70 people stood around, awaiting the performance of the four '80s rock/alternative/punk bands that were ready to "rock" Tuscaloosa.

About 9:30 p.m., on the downstairs stage, Blip opened the evening. A cross between Radiohead and Smashing Pumpkins, this local band, consisting of mainly UA students, really know how to pump up a crowd, and set the tone for the rest of the evening.

During Blip's performance, more people trickled in, upping the number of the crowd to 100. With the entrance of The Katies, the crowd began to pack around the stage. This Tennessee-based trio really knows how to liven a crowd with their energetic head-banging, rowdy dancing and amusing comments concerning Alabama football. After about an hour, amid catcalls and whistles, The Katies finished their performance and the crowd headed upstairs to finish off the evening with Self and The Marvelous 3.

Approximately 125 people crowded around the upstairs stage to hear the funky, punk music of the hip-hoppin' quintet, Self. As lead singer, Matt Mahaffey, jumped onto the pink, fur-covered drum set, the crowd was just getting a glimpse of the animation in this group. Although Mahaffey's actions were quite comical, it was only embers in this crowd's fire. It was Self's lively performance and positive attitude that kept the crowd's attention.

At about midnight, lead singer and guitarist for Marvelous 3, Butch, walks out on stage and begins to play a soft, lilting lullaby-type song. As Butch ends the song, he is joined by drummer,

Dracula elicits howls of terror

By Jessica Smith

As the successful cast of The Crucible moves out of the Bean-Brown Theatre, a new cast, set and crew move in, to begin working on the next show. The new cast has just enough time to prepare for opening night, or do they?

With Bram Stoker's Dracula being Theatre Tuscaloosa's first show of the Millennium season, the pressure is on for this all-star cast and crew to make it a spellbinding hit. This horrifying love story requires an enormous amount of set work and design, considering that Dracula appears and disappears throughout the play. The costumes for the show should be sensational considering that "Dracula" is going to be played by Theatre Tuscaloosa's very own costumer, Daryl Harris. His talents go beyond making wonderful costumes, and take the stage as he prepares to hypnotize the audience and find new blood.

The show is filled with several Theatre Tuscaloosa vets, such as the multi-talented Drew Baker, who also just appeared in The Crucible as Rebecca Nurse. "We don't have a lot of time to put the show together, but because the cast is filled with such talented and experienced actors, I don't have too many worries. Dracula is going to be a great show!" said Eric Curtis, stage manager for Dracula.

This horrifying show will have you trembling with fear as wolves howl, bats fly, and "Dracula" appears before you, searching for his next victim. So remember that when the sun goes down and the moon shines full, watch that shadow that appears from behind you, because you could be next.

Performances are scheduled for Oct. 22 through Oct. 24, and again Oct. 27 through Oct. 31 at the Bean-Brown Theatre. Evening performances begin at 7:30 p.m. with Wednesday and Sunday matinees beginning at 2 p.m.

Tickets may be purchased over the phone by calling the Theatre Tuscaloosa box office at 391-2277 or in person at the box office from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Ticket prices are $15 for adults, $13 for seniors, and $8 for students.

Slug, and bass player, Jayce, and for the next hour-and-a-half, the Marvelous 3 holds the crowd captive with their original and cover songs flashing back to the '80s.

While "Butch" has the audience singing and laughing along with his animated and playful behavior, Jayce elicits more hoops and hollers from the already wired crowd with his frisky, flirtatious dancing. And very impressive is how Slug sits back, without missing a beat, and laughs at his bandmates' humorous demeanor.

With original songs such as the ever popular "Freak of the Week," the mysterious sounds of "Vampires in Love," and the painful mourning in "Let Me Go," the group leads the crowd on a journey of mystery and pain through the use of rocking riffs of the guitars, sinister voices, and the hard pounding of the drums. Other originals included "Indie Queen," "You're So Yesterday" (a song about new beginnings after a break-up), "Until You See," and "Over Your Head" (describing ending and resentment).

Throughout the performance, Marvelous 3 incorporated a few classic covers such as Journey's "Loving, Touching, Squeezing" and a rendition of "A Brick in the Wall," where the group pokes fun at the Backstreet Boys, Brittany Spears, and Ricky Martin, giving the song a comical twist.

Butch's ever-changing facial expressions, Jayce's role as the "obnoxious crowd guy" and the comforting sanity of the group present in Slug, are only sparks of this group's electrifying aura. As Marvelous 3 finished the closing song, "Freak of the Week," and began to exit the stage, the crowd called them back to perform some more. Finally the group went out with a bang, ending the evening in a dramatic way with the cover "Always Something There to Remind Me."

The Lyric Hall can pat themselves on the back for the four great bands performing on that night. The show was spectacular, not so much for the talent of the bands, but for the genuine excitement and energy that each band member had while on stage. It made the evening very enjoyable and one not likely to forget. If you did happen to miss out on all the fun, keep your eyes open and your ears peeled so another experience like this won't pass you by.

Stay tuned for next issue's review of the local band, Pain, also playing at the Lyric Hall on Oct. 15. Make plans to be there!

Gifts needed from one book lover to another

The library and reading department, along with Circle K, the student service organization, are sponsoring a book drive. And they are requesting the help of all book lovers—and owners. These organizations are collecting books for residents of the Brewer Porch Children's Center, children between the ages of 10 and 15.

If you have a new or previously read children's book which you can donate, please drop it in one of the collection boxes located in the libraries of the Martin and Fredd campuses.

If you do not have a book to donate, but would like to participate, you may donate money to the cause.

The drive will continue through November.

Sports

—The Buccaneers are Here to Play—

Golf team making strong fall tune-ups

They haven't won every tournament they've played, but the defending national champion Buccaneers are acquitting themselves very well in the fall tournaments. After winning their own invitational in September, the golfers have taken a third and a second in October outings.

On Oct. 5, the Buccaneers improved by 14 strokes from round one to two in the Union University Invitational in Union City, Ky. They played their first round in nearly frigid temperatures, and played in a frozen style. On the second day they shot 291, an excellent score in any conditions.

Drew Jones of Shelton tied for second in individual scoring with a round of 68 and an even par total of 144 for the tourney. He was named to the all-tournament team, his seventh such honor in a row.

Other Shelton scores were Danny Germaine 73-72 for 155;

Nick Bamber 75-76 for 151; Adam Harris 74-75 for 149 and Bryant West 80-77 for 157.

What makes the Shelton team's performance remarkable is that it was made against a field of 11 four-year colleges.

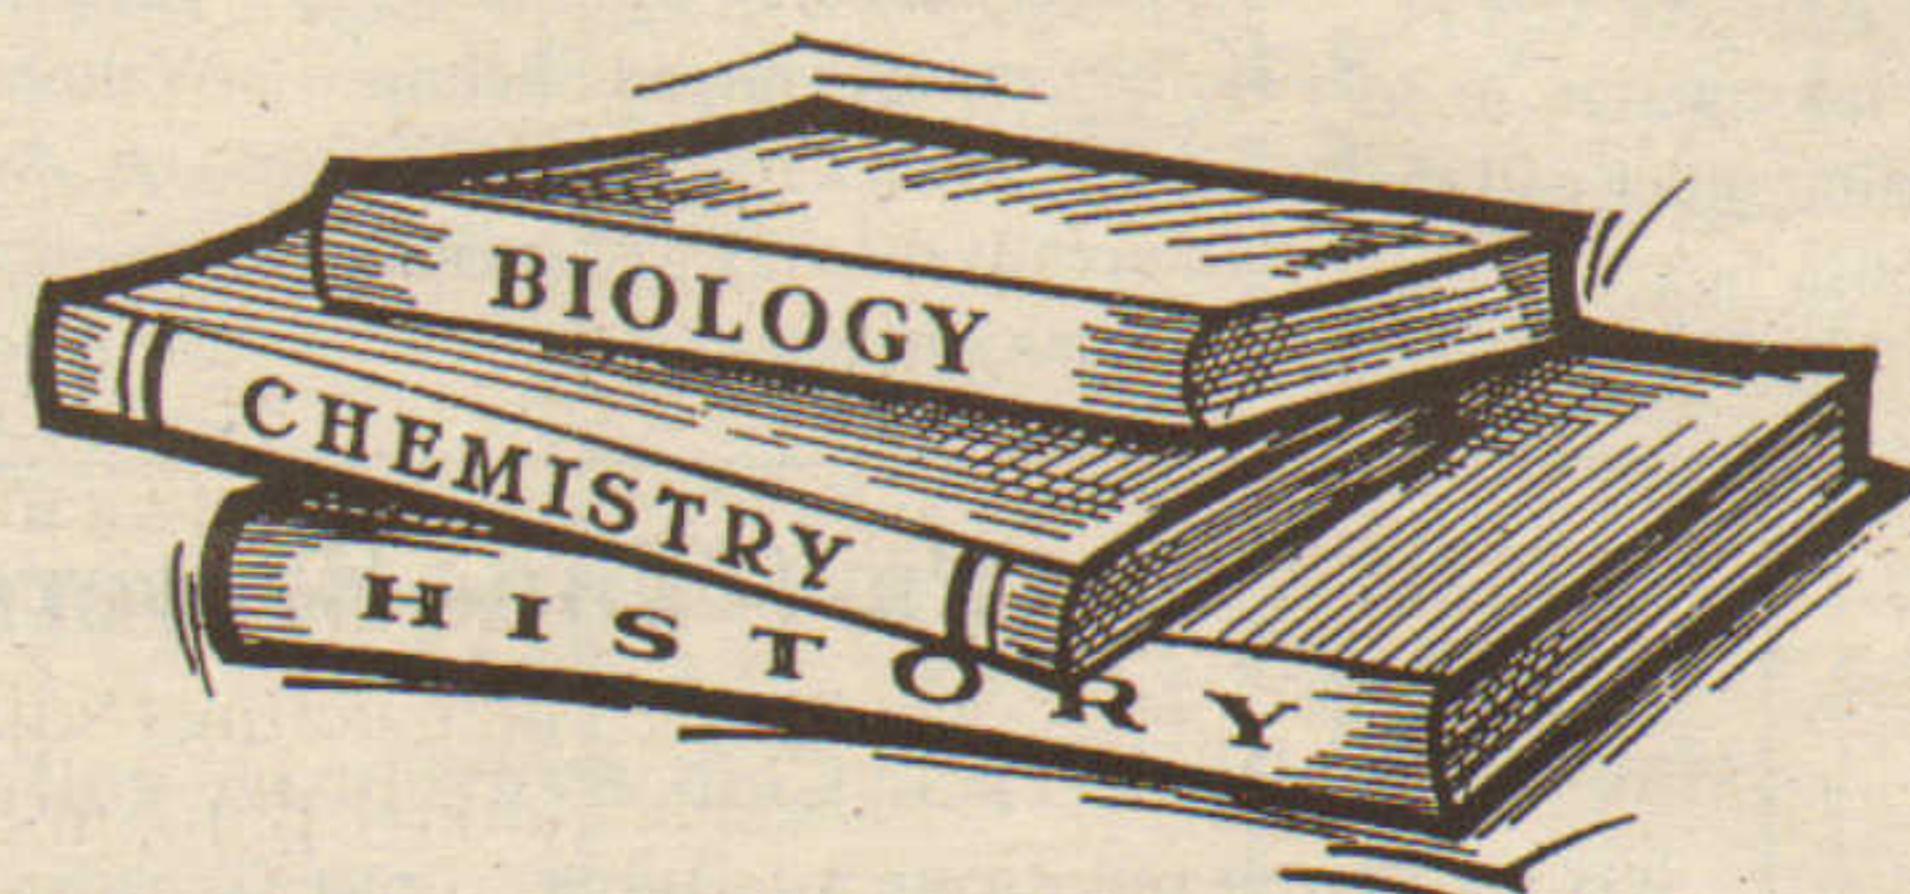

On Oct. 12, the golf team took second place in the Meridian Eagle Invitational.

After opening with a 301, the team improved by two strikes and ended in a tie with Faulkner State at 600. All five team members then went to the first tee to play it off. In college golf, playoffs are sudden-death with the best four scores of each hole counting. "We played the tricky hole well with all five of our players having a chance for par, but only two of our players made it. Faulkner had three pars, and that was it," said golf coach Matt Terry. "But I think it was all a learning experience and we'll be better in the long run for the loss."

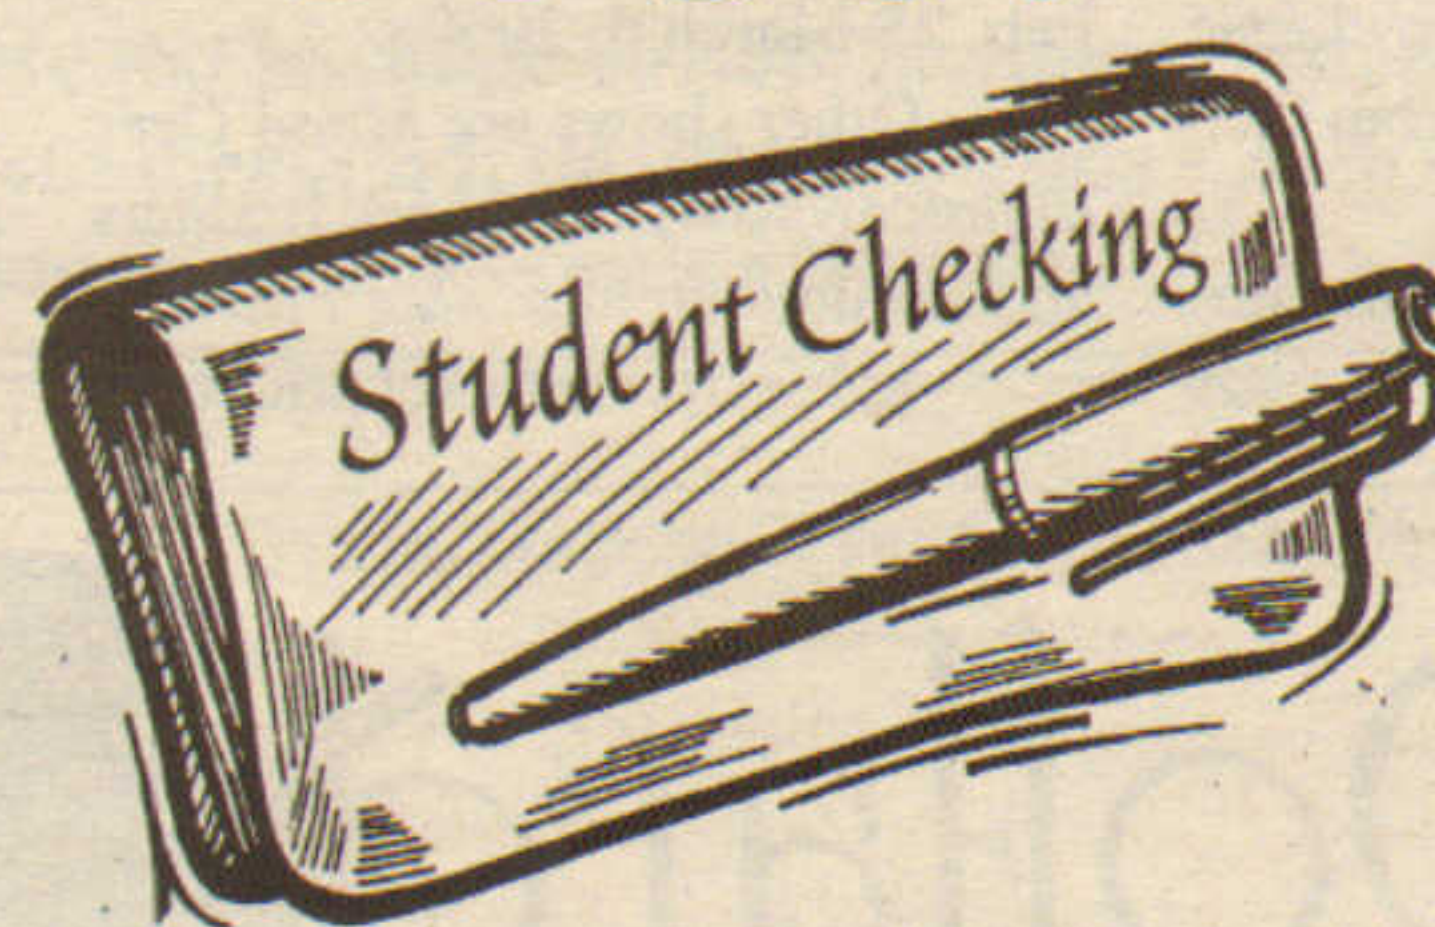

Raring to Go! The 1999-2000 women's basketball team has recently begun practicing. Fired up about their chances this year are (L-R, back row) Leann Frazier, Magon Searcy, Angie Stripling, Savannah Williams, Genniefer Meeks, (middle) Katrina Elliott, Summer King, Catherine Manolakis, Bridget Waters, Ashley McKnight, (front) Sheila Curry, Erica Edwards, Jennifer "Frog" Whitehead, Teri Willis and Natisha Hardrick.

What's happenin' with clubs at Shelton State this year?

Student Government Association

Campaigning for Vice-President will begin Oct. 20-21. School wide elections will be held Oct. 22. Applications to run must be turned in to Tracy Branch in counseling center or Kim Cockrell, SGA president.

Club unity meetings will be held in Room 1412 at 1 p.m. on the second Wednesday of every month. Regular SGA meetings will also be held in Room 1412 at 1 p.m. on the remaining Wednesdays.

During the month of October, Circle K will be co-sponsoring a book drive. All donations will be taken to Brewer's Porch, a home for abused and disturbed children. Boxes will be set up in the library, for you to drop your books.

At 9:30 a.m. on Oct. 27, Circle K will be trick or treating with the children at Shelton State's Child Development Center.

On Oct. 28, Circle K will be trick or treating at DCH in the children's wing.

The bake sale was a huge success. Thank you for everyone who participated.

Phi Theta Kappa's High School Leadership Day will be Nov. 16. It is geared for high school juniors in order to promote leadership abilities in the school and community. It is pretty much an all day event with group sessions and joint meetings.

On Oct. 25, Phi Theta Kappa will work with Shelton State's Theatre Department and Student Nurse Association to provide a blood drive for Shelton State students. If anyone is interested in donating blood, please come by campus on the Oct. 25 and give us your blood. This is an all-day event.

Phi Theta Kappa holds meetings every Tuesday at 12:30 in Room 1413.

Baptist Campus Ministries

If you are interested in Bible studies and a chance to fellowship with students who share your same interests, Baptist Campus Ministries is the place for you.

The meetings will be Wednesdays, noon-1 p.m., in Room D2 (off of the Food Court). If anyone has any interest in BCM, contact Clint Wortham, the student minister, at 391-9123.

Any other clubs wishing their news in the paper should contact the Courier at 2406.
